OPEN ACCESS POLICY

Recommendations for the publications of ZBW employees
November 2012
The ZBW recommends that research publications of its authors should be published in a freely accessible digital form, either directly in Open Access media or parallel-published, resp. with an embargo period, via the local repository infrastructure. In this regard we pursue the following points:

→ The ZBW recommends that its authors publish their scholarly works in a form that allows direct or at least time-delayed publishing in Open Access. This recommendation does not interfere with publishing in high-quality journals or conference proceedings. If, in the author’s opinion, there is no suitable high-ranking Open Access outlet for his or her paper, he or she may of course publish it at first in a relevant gated format. In such cases the author’s contract should be thoroughly checked to ensure that at least a time-delayed Open Access version of the paper is provided via the ZBW repository infrastructure.

→ The ZBW offers information and advice to support its authors in their attempts to clarify legal aspects regarding the Open Access publication of their research papers.

→ The ZBW operates a local repository infrastructure which allows authors to make their own publications accessible and citable with minimum effort on their part. It is interdisciplinary by nature and thus complementary to our subject-based publication server EconStor and serves as an institutional repository for the publications of ZBW employees. All publications accessible in the repository will also be made available via LeibnizOpen, the Open Access portal of the Leibniz Association.

→ Since publishing in Open Access media sometimes requires author’s fees, the ZBW attempts to provide financial support to its employees in these cases, in order to ensure that the contribution is freely available.

→ In future bids for third-party funding, the ZBW will apply for separate publishing funds as far as possible, in order to finance project-related publications in Open Access media from these funds.
